

Eating and Entertainment

Eating out in Florence has become increasingly expensive, however there are still some restaurants (Trattoria) or wine bars (Osteria) where you can have a good meal and drink some good wine all at a reasonable price. Tuscan recipes on the whole are very traditional with the use of lots of olive oil, beans in all shapes and sizes, stews of meats and even vegetables. Eating out in Florence is usually a very pleasant experience although everyone has a different opinion as to which places are the best. Be adventurous and try something that might look good to you even if they are not listed in your guide books. You never know, and if you do stumble upon something great let us know. Every restaurant has a closing day which varies from place to place. To avoid getting to a restaurant and finding it closed call in advance.

Booking is also advisable.

As there is a fixed service charge added on to your bill, tipping is not mandatory. You will find this service charge added on to your bill in any restaurant, bar or coffee house, where you sit down and are served. If you are very happy with the service and would like to leave a tip then the general rule is to round up the bill. Remember that by law you must be given a receipt (ricevuta fiscale) which you keep when you leave the premises.
